SOAP Note for Mental Health

| Patient information |  |
| :--- | :--- |
| First name: Margot | Last name: Wilson |
| Date of birth: $12 / 12 / 1995$ | Date: $05 / 15 / 2024$ |
| Subjective | Margot struggles to pay attention at work and often finds that her mind drifts. Margot states, "I feel like  I can only focus on one task for five minutes at a time before my mind starts wandering." She feels  that she is unproductive and that her inability to focus impairs her work performance. |
| Margot claims she fems anxious because of this and that, "I always come home feeling on edge. I  worry that I will be fired soon and I'm not sure about to combat this." Margot retains motivation, saying  she wants to do better 'more than anything,' but is unsure how to go about it. |  |

Objective

Margot is visibly stressed discussing this, taking many short breaths. She has produced less work than usual, completing only 2 projects in one month compared to her usual 5.

She also presents a disability to completely engage in the session, with her sentences often going off on tangents. She is shifty in her seat and her eyes dart around the room in frequent intervals.

Assessment

Margot has not received any previous treatment or mental health support. This is her first session with me, and there is clear evidence of attention deficits. Whether this is part of a larger issue remains to be seen, and can be more closely assessed with more sessions.

It is recommended that Margot learns more cognitive focusing techniques to increase her attention span and ability to attend to tasks.

Plan

Margot will see me again in 2 weeks on 06/06/2024 and has been provided with cognitive focus techniques. Additionally, she is learning to adapt her thought patterns to ease anxiety when it comes to working. The aim is to improve upon these considerably, and at this time, she remains relatively healthy otherwise.
